How can we resolve the above error? A: This error is usually a result of a large amount of traffic happening at the same time. Check that your application is not consuming more traffic than it is handling. If you only have one instance of this application running and it is in a critical point (i.e. at logon, database connection, etc) then chances are you are at a point of saturation.

Android 4.1.1 on Verizon Galaxy Nexus Released - kjetil3 ===== kjetil3

There are two critical issues in this topic: 1\ The update doesn't affect devices running the Int'l (CDMA) version of the network. 2\ Updates from Verizon are not as fast as updates from Google, and unfortunately the update process only seems to work if you turn on the unlockable bootloader. This is therefore not a really good sign that the update process will work if you turn off the bootloader in the future. This comes from a separate topic on this topic [1]. [1] c9d1549cdd

What's new in Easy Cat Timer:

The GREAT BRITAIN and IRELAND RAILWAY EMPIRE This thread covers the pre-Victorian Britain, namely the railways, Post Office, Telegraphs, & Dockyards. Most will know all about the achievements of the Victorian period, but there were many positive firsts in the pre-Victorian history. And there are as many firsts to list as there are books.

Elevated Earthwork In 1831 an earthwork railway cutting was constructed, this ran along the line of Spring Garden Street in London for 18 miles. The first pumping engine was used for the track, which was level and flat except for fast clay areas. The track was operated using horse power. The 22 mile London and Croydon Railway was established in 1833, the first steam locomotive was not used. Mechanical traction continued to come in but the railways often had to be double tracked or negotiated steep hills with wooden rails.

Wooden Rails Made On The Spot The railways of 1840 were the first to be constructed of solid wood. Laying of the rails was done by machines instead of by men using twine.

The Queen's Jubilee in 1847 saw the first use of steam locomotives. According to art critic John Ruskin "...the first locomotive on the British railroads, a 2-6-0 built by the Brighton Iron Foundry, made her first run in May, 1847. She worked a 20 ft gauge track, using single stones as rails. To bestow on her the name of "The Brighton," her engine driver, who had been four hours stopping her on a level, gave her a kick, and she went off without mishap.

Horse operated Railways In 1833 the Great Western Railway (GWR) opened with a route from Bristol to London, and boasted that the first portion of railway to be constructed in Great Britain was a railway line! Further extensions built by the company were shown on maps, but the passing of the Railways Act parliamentary act saw some obstacles in the process of acquiring not only land but also the line itself. As a result, a portion of property was leased from the developers of Westbury on Trym, and used for line construction.

Britannia Mines Railway The Britannia mines at Grantham was connected to the East Lincolnshire Railway line and a local resident, Peter Weston, was responsible for the mine owners taking an interest in

A long time ago, there was a skinny, weird, and odd looking guy named Zarro. This guy was obsessed with robotics. He has invented many robots, and even worked as a virtual assistant for the CEO of a big company, doing all the work for her. One day she took Zarro for a walk and never returned. In fact he couldn't even find her. He was lost too. He wandered through the streets of the city with no clue what to do. Then he saw a robot trash bin and he tried to crush it with his hands and feet, but it was very hard. It was then when he decided to use its claw as a tool to explore, climb, grab, and smash. After many days he met a girl, yes he met a girl. She gave him a name (Robotron) and a host of new things, and a Robo-Claw. Robozarro is a 2D physics based side-scroller, bringing the action of the game to life with 2D physics. Physics can be used to manipulate time and space. In fact, it is the fundamental force of nature. Physics is the study of matter and energy. Robozarro takes place in the city of Mech Angeles. It is a city overrun by robots. There are many secret places and places you can't find without the Robo-Claw. There are also statues, things, and even humans that can give you Robo-Claws to add to your inventory. The game takes place in two modes, Story Mode and Time Trial Mode. In both there are 30 stages to challenge yourself with. For the time-trial mode you have a 50-stage challenge. The game features:

- Classic Action, Arcade, and Puzzle Game
- Over 30 stages
- 30 minutes play-time
- 3 Chapters with 5 levels each
- 3 different story lines
- 2D physics based on 2D graphics
- Robo-Claw
- Time Trial mode: 50 stages
- 3 difficulty modes
- Story Mode: 30 stages
