A: when you call the app, it calls BarTender Setup.exe which probably has a manifest in it that states That's because at design time, you already have administrator rights. Only at install time will the installer have those rights. Try to either add the same manifest to your setup EXE or add an to your app.manifest. So, if your installer does request an admin account, you need to do a little work to allow for that, or install it on a non-admin account. You can use the as a starting point to see how to create the installer. But, since you mentioned you've no idea what you're doing, I'll also tell you you might want to wait for the product to mature. Evolution of a polymorphic calmodulin-binding domain in the sequences of neuropeptide Y. Calmodulin (CaM) binding domains are found in a variety of peptide hormones and neuropeptides. While CaM binding domains are highly conserved within the same peptide, they exhibit a high degree of polymorphism between peptides. The CaM-binding domain of neuropeptide Y (NPY) consists of two repeats of a 20-amino-acid CaM-binding sequence which are connected by a linker of various lengths. In this report we analyse the evolution of this polymorphic domain in the sequences of neuropeptides Y. We show that the CaM-binding domain is not well conserved, with an overall similarity of only 34%, yet the CaM-binding sequences are. Sequence analyses demonstrate that the CaM-binding domains in the sequences of neuropeptide Y, growth hormone releasing factor (GRF) and the GnRH releasing hormone are all derived from the same ancestral CaM-binding domain, which evolved by duplication of a sequence encoding the 20-amino-acid CaM-binding consensus. The mechanism of CaM 6d1f23a050
