would like to add all the files that are in a particular folder to the global git repo and add the subfolder to an existing local git repo. Is there a way to do this? A: If the existing repo is bare, then you can just add the folder to it (same way you would add a git repository). If the existing repo has some content (i.e. a working tree), then you first must make a copy of your existing files (if there are any), before adding the folder. (E.g., `git clone your existing repo to ~/new_dir && cd ~/new_dir && git init && git add. && git commit`) If the existing repo is not bare, you can use `git archive` (see documentation). If you have submodules, try to make an archive of them first (see documentation) [The features of infectious complications in the clinical course of patients with pulmonary tuberculosis receiving standard chemotherapy]. To analyze the general trends in complications and infectious complications in the course of standard chemotherapy of patients with pulmonary tuberculosis (PTB). To investigate the efficacy of the present anti-tuberculosis treatment strategy, and to improve it. A review and analysis was made of the clinical files of 1,594 PTB patients (1,071 females and 523 males) treated in 5 tuberculosis centers of Voronezh, Leningrad, Novosibirsk, and Ufa (a total population of 2,403,300).
