This program is open to all Fordham students and offers the participant not only a four-week intensive experience, but also pre and postprogram learning opportunities. The program is presented in a series of weekends, with four 6-week time blocks from October through May of each year. The first half of the year includes the academic component, while the second half includes academic and hands-on learning with a clinical component. During this last 6-week block, all the participants will be required to be in the clinic for a period of time (4-8 hours per week). After completing the program, graduate students will have experience with orthodontic assessment and treatment planning, the physics of tooth movement, the use of braces as an element of fixed and removable treatment, the skills of traditional fixed orthodontics, the mechanics of pre and post-orthodontic extraction treatment and the decision-making process for treatment planning. This program fulfills requirements as set forth in the J.D. and M.A. programs of the Fordham Law School. Structure of the Fordham Orthodontic Essentials Program Week 1: Introduction to the Body and
